copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

The "Rockefeller Foundation" sounds strong.

It apparently is not a case of Alids well that ends well in New York.

When all other signs fail, then there is the departure of the base ball teams for their spring practice.

Surely Jawn D. will save out just a few pennies to solve his declining years and buy golf clubs.

Probably the London common council thought Roosevelt would take the "freedom of the city" anyway, so they voted it to him.

Now Congressman Gardner of Massachusetts isn't ashamed to be called an insurgent; but perhaps he has insured further than Congressman Foster.

They are bringing over a portion of Irish soil for Taft to stand on when speaking in Chicago St. Patrick's day. What he needs more is the barnyard stone to kiss.

The singular thing about this mob murder of an accused negro in Dallas, Texas, yesterday, was that the mob of infuriated people was led by a negro. Race, color or previous condition of servitude did not enter into this little affair.

In chasing the phony faro game artists who fleeced Coleman, according to the statement of the young bank clerk at Cambridge, Mass., the clever sleuths should not lose sight of the main issue, which is, why the money the money was ever abstracted from the bank in the first place. That's more important, it seems to us, than finding the somewhat hazy swindlers.

Following his conviction on the charge of accepting a bribe while acting as magistrate, Judge Henry J. Furlong of New York City is being mercilessly scored by the press and the public; the punishment thereby given more than making up for the kindness shown him in the courtroom. The scorn of the public is deserved, for justice trembles when one of its members stoops to such practices as Judge Furlong has been guilty of.

President Taft's refusal to permit A. C. Shaw, a man dismissed from the forestry service, to practice law before the interior department, indicates that Secretary Ballinger's influence in the White House still holds firm; and it deepens the mystery surrounding the Pinchot-Ballinger affair. President Taft was so positive in his denunciation of Shaw that he gave the impression of having something in mind which had not yet seen the light of publicity. Not being convinced that the president has such information, the public will turn naturally toward Pinchot's support, indirectly through one of his subordinates, Mr. Shaw.

NO TIME LOST HERE.

The new mayor and aldermen of the city of Barre didn't lose any time in getting busy. At nine o'clock the morning after election, they organized and started the municipal machinery. That augurs well for their industry, at least.

They were following precedent, that's all. It has always been the habit of Barre city councils to "get the jump" on business, as to ball players say when they smash into their opponents' line the minute the ball is snapped. There is little sulfered and fiddleded about Barre's inaugurations; the voters elect their officials; the officials graciously accept, walk into their offices, take off their hats and begin activities where their predecessors left off.

The present city council did not see fit to change the custom, and they began business shortly after breakfast on the morning following their election. And the quiet, unpretentious way of doing things seems to be the best, too. Barre is a small municipality, and any attempt at pomp or clutter would be ridiculous, whereas it may fit a city of large size, like Boston or New York. And that very simplicity makes for industry, of which the contemporary speaks and commends.

CITIZEN OR CIPHER.

Are you a citizen or a cipher? Answer the question next Tuesday at the polls and for the good of your home community vote "no" on the license question.

According to the contemporary, then, there were 153 more citizens than "ciphers" in Barre, as the election showed; but that designation of the minority is rather derogatory to several hundred men who voted to license the sale of liquor, among whom were un-

The harder the names the better the material, seems to be the rule, but besides these hard-to-pronounce kinds we also have the good old fashioned styles in two-piece or union suits. "In union there is strength."

doubtedly a great many men that the contemporary is, otherwise, proud to have as individual units in the community. The mere fact that a voter marks a cross in the square set next to the word "Yes" on the ballot does not indicate that he is a nonentity in the life of the town or city; nor does it indicate that such an one is not public-spirited and interested in the general welfare of his chosen residence. It is barely possible that a great many of the men who voted affirmatively on Tuesday did so from honest convictions, along with others who had different reasons for voting on that side of the question. Leastwise, the contemporary might have given them the benefit of the doubt and not gathered them all up into one basket of "ciphers" and thrown into the refuse heap together. Maybe the term looks different after election.

No Alimony.

The Windsor county village that recently took the name of Maxwell Evans has resumed its maiden name—without alimony, of course.—St. Albans Messenger.

Hindley's Intention.

Reports have appeared in the Vermont press recently to the effect that H. L. Hindley, editor of the Herald, had severed his connection with this newspaper and had accepted an editorial position at Spokane, Washington. In view of the publicity already given this matter, it seems well to state that Mr. Hindley, who is now recovering from an operation for hernia in New York City, has secured leave of absence from this newspaper and will visit his brother at Spokane, while he enjoys a rest that will hasten his recovery. He will also see the West and while there will look over the business proposition, that has been presented him, but which has not been accepted.—Rutland Herald.

Rutland's Dunes.

There is a serious side, too, to the confusion in some people's minds as to the James Dunn who voted for Tuesday for alderman. James H. Dunn of South Main street has been three a candidate for alderman, James C. Dunn of Cottage street has been five marshal for several years. Any man, who didn't know the identity of the two men should have been so ashamed of it as to not confess it. It is just this persistent ignorance of and indifference to municipal affairs that is responsible for most all the civil life that this city has suffered from. It's serious, and it's deplorable. Really, the citizen who doesn't know James H. Dunn, alderman candidate, from James C. Dunn, chief of the fire department, should be disgraced on the grounds of ignorance. Any citizen should know that the chief of the fire department was ineligible for the office of alderman, for a man can't be both an alderman and an appointee and servant of the alderman. That's fundamental.—Rutland News.

Webb of Tombs.

Amid the postures and the pangs of insurgents and near insurgents, the explosion of perorations in the Congressional Record, the screech of upstarts and the rest of the old tedious show of politics, the face of a new actor, unmarked, unstuffed, unroughed, unperiwigged, is as welcome as "water to the traveler in the desert," or rum to dryest Maine. To our shame we say it, but we never heard of the Hon. J. M. Webb of Tombs county, Georgia, until last week. While memory holds his seat we shall not forget him. This is his platform:

"Unsolicted by any one, and because I need the office, I announce for the office of tax collector."

Wants it because he needs it. Haven't been persuaded to become a candidate for the benefit of his fellow citizens and at considerable personal sacrifice to himself should he be elected. He sees no crisis impending. He seeks not to fight Greed, to make a last stand on behalf of the plain people against the interests and the money power. He wants the office because he needs it.

Smash goes the lantern of Diogenes. The Hon. J. M. Webb is found. It is too much to hope that he will ever get the post to which he aspires so frankly, but his example adds to the sum of human virtue and enriches the world.—New York Evening Sun.

St. Albans' Vote for License.

St. Albans has again voted under the local option law to license the liquor traffic in this city for another year, and by the largest majority since the first year the law went into effect. The Messenger feels it to be a public duty at this time to utter just a word of caution to the men that are likely to handle this liquor business for the ensuing year. They will make a serious mistake if they construe this unusually large vote for license to mean that there has been any change whatever in public sentiment in St. Albans regarding the liquor traffic. They will make a serious mistake if, upon the influence of this notion, they grow careless and lazy, not simply in their observance of the law, but in the general conduct of their business, to the point of lapsing into a free and easy trade that is aimed to catch every dime in sight as long as they do keep within the statute.

There has been no change in sentiment here regarding the liquor law. St. Albans is, we say, naturally a licentious city, but that means that the majority is willing and prefers to vote for license only so long as the traffic is handled as it should be. When the law is abused, when the liquor dealers become careless, or greedy, then every honest man is ready to vote "no" to rebuke them for their indifference to decent public sentiment and to put a stop to the mischief that flows from their betrayal of the public confidence. The responsibility is with the licensees, where it belongs.—St. Albans Messenger.

ANOTHER OLD VOTER.

J. A. Damon of Cabot Started in Voting in 1841; Missed Two Years.

Mr. Editor: I saw by your issue of February 22 that Mr. Hiram Marshall, had not missed attending town meeting in his town for 44 years, and I wish to say that I cast my first vote in 1841 for President William H. Harrison, and have not missed attending and taking part in town meeting in Cabot since that date, except two years that I spent in Mississippi. I attended yesterday's March meeting and voted "no license." I am living, since January 22, last, in my 80th year.

Respectfully yours,
J. H. Damon.

Exciting Time When City Council Organized and Elected President.

The city council held a special meeting last night, the first since Tuesday's election. Quite an exciting time was had when the nominations for president of the board were made. Alderman Fitzgerald presented the name of Alderman Deady and Alderman Taft the name of Alderman Lang. There was considerable talk on the question, Alderman Deady saying that it was understood that, if Deady was re-elected, Lang was to nominate him for the position, as Alderman Deady had done for him last year. Alderman Taft explained that Mr. Lang had asked him some time before to present his name, and as the latter was the only member of council absent, Alderman Deady thought he understood the deal that was on and intended that Lang's absence was self-explanatory. When it came to a vote, Mr. Lang was declared president, as the nomination of Mr. Deady was not even seconded. Mr. Deady stated that he would accept the situation gracefully, but was satisfied that every thing was fixed up beforehand. Some bills were voted paid and the different committees were appointed for the ensuing year.

It is expected that the brick work will be done and the roof put onto the power house of the City, Dacott, Frost company in a week. Some of the coffee dam went out during the high water but can be replaced as soon as the water is down.

A special meeting of the council of the Washington County Humane society was held yesterday afternoon. No action was taken on any matter, but reports of the different committees were read and the cases of some animals which are known to be unfit to be driven were talked over and will be investigated.

Bethany church held a business meeting last night and filled two vacancies in the standing committee by electing Mrs. Drivell to succeed herself and Mrs. Hiram Odell to fill the other place. New members were voted into the church. A Junior Topic club has been formed, composed of the younger members of the church.

Business in the shops of the Colton Manufacturing company has so increased that the brick factory was started yesterday and a partition which, for two years or more, had divided that part of the works was removed and the whole building opened for business. It will be necessary to employ several extra hands.

The case between Mrs. Asunta Deliel and S. Marvaglia, which had been dragging along for nearly a week, was ended yesterday, when the latter was fined $5 and costs of $17.47. The trouble was over the alleged slander of Mrs. Deliel against Mr. Marvaglia in an assault, both parties sprawling on the floor in the barber shop of Nicola Columbia. Yesterday afternoon city court held a session in which Mrs. Deliel was the respondent and she was found guilty and subjected to the same fine which had been imposed on Marvaglia in the morning. She appealed her case to the county court.

Daniel P. Kerrin received word yesterday of the death of his mother, Mrs. Anna Kerrin, at her home in Denver, Colo., where she had lived for the past few years. She was 70 years of age and was born in Morristown. The telegram to Mr. Kerrin did not state the cause of his mother's death and no arrangements had been made for the funeral, but it is thought likely that the body will be brought here and interment made in the Catholic cemetery. Besides her son here, Mrs. Kerrin left two daughters and two sons in Denver and one daughter in South Dakota.

$20,000 INSURANCE.

Allowed on Episcopal Property Loss in Burlington.

Burlington, March 4.—The losses sustained at the burning of the parish house and chapel of St. Paul's church the morning of February 27, were adjusted in a satisfactory manner last evening, when the adjusters of the insurance companies reached a decision to offer a settlement in the neighborhood of $20,000. This was accepted by the representative of the church and the adjusters left last night for their homes.

The insurance companies were represented by W. R. McIlhenny of the Atlas Insurance company and Gilman McAlister of the New Hampshire Insurance company. The church was represented by Col. H. W. Allen, junior warden, and in addition to these, there were present at the meeting Thomas D. Watson of Springfield and T. W. Rogers of Brandon, who built the structure.

BOY IS ARRESTED.

Was Sent Across Canadian Border by Southsayer.

St. Johnsbury, March 4.—One of the parties indicted at the recent term of U. S. court was D. Goulet of Coaticook, Que., who came to Norton's Mills to get mail for Emile Goulet of Coaticook, who went under aliases of Dr. E. Mooley, Louis Guyon and A. Renaud. Goulet operated a fraud scheme in Canada until he was excluded from using mails there and then he opened headquarters at Norton's Mills. He posed as an astrologer, clairvoyant and possessor of valuable secrets. His first advertisement called for three two-cent stamps, then he offered monthly readings for $1 and the twelve secrets for $3. He had typewritten slips exactly alike which he sent to each visitor. He was doing a large business, receiving about 100 letters and many money orders and registered letters daily. He sent the boy Goulet into Vermont for his mail and the boy was first arrested by Deputy Marshall Miles of Newport. He was placed in jail at Newport and yesterday an attorney from Canada came and furnished bail for his release.
